Lomilomi

Lomilomi is a spiritual, ancient Hawaiian massage technique passed on through family generations by either the kupuna (elders) or kahuna (keepers of the secret). This treatment begins with a pule (prayer) in the Hawaiian language and employs the use of forearms and elbows to create a rhythmical and vigorous euphoria.

Lomilomi Hula

Lomilomi Hula transcends your being into another dimension with lomilomi strokes choreographed to Hawaiian music. Created by our own kumu (teacher) lomilomi, it is descriptively portrayed as doing the hula (dance) on the body. Sensuously delightful. A must for couples!

Mauna Lani > spa

Opu Huli

Opu (stomach) huli (turn) was traditionally performed on our keiki (little ones) when they acquired an upset tummy. A candle is lit, your wawae (feet) measured, and a pule repeated while warm kukui nut oil slowly fills your pliko (navel). This lomilomi begins at your na au (abdomen), circulating outwards. For jet lag, menstrual cramps, gastritis, or any low back or abdominal discomfort.

Pohaku Paa

Pohaku Pa'a (basalt stones) had many different uses in Hawaiian culture. The ili'ili (little) stones were fire-heated, then positioned along the spine of a freshly oiled back. Various sizes of hot pohaku pa'a and kukui or coconut nut oils are utilized in this massage.
